- Volume (Necessity): Volume of individual decisions - if there are so multifarious that it cannot reasonably be expected that the minister deal with them all, more likely for delegation to be valid.
 - Size and complexity of organisation: The size and complexity of the organisation in which the power must be exercised
 - Agency is more readily implied in large/complex organisations e.g. government departments, universities etc
- c. The Carltona Principle has been extended beyond ministers and decision makers who are directly accountable to parliament to the Heads of Departments e.g. the Commissioner of Taxation in O'Reilly (1982).
- There has however been strong dissent by Mason J in O'Reilly and in Alvaro (1994) where it is argued that the Carltona Principle should only be extended to Ministers where the agent exercises little or no discretion and there is minimal impact on the affected person.
 - Alvaro – factors suggesting discretion must be exercised personally:
 - Discretion expressly vested in secretary
 - Decision affects rights and liabilities of persons
 - Discretion was guided by policy of Act and at direction of Minister
- d. Recap – Ministers
- If a Minister must make a decision personally (i.e. agency or delegation is not permissible under enabling legislation)
 - the Minister cannot rely on agency: Aboriginal Affairs Minister v Peko-Walsend; Tickner v Chapman
 - Departmental officers can assist the Minister with full and accurate summaries
 - The Minister does not have to read all the underlying documents (contrast Black CJ in Tickner) ...
 - But the summaries must bring to the Minister's attention all the material facts
 - Failure by the Minister to have regard to a relevant fact cannot be remedied by attributing to the Minister his/her "alter ego's" consideration
 - In Tickner the male Minister could not rely on a general account of secret women's business
 - Court held that he had to look at the documents personally

'State of mind' subjective powers

- Subjective state of mind powers apply where the statute provides that a decision maker must/may take action if they have a certain 'state of mind', such as being 'satisfied' of a particular matter or holding a particular 'belief', or "in the councils opinion".
- Subjective state of mind powers are subject to the normal grounds of review e.g. error of law in interpreting jurisdiction (where the administrator adopts the wrong test; considering

Procedure for Review of Administrative Units

1. Context

This document outlines the specific elements of the quality review process for Administrative units at Trinity College Dublin (TCD), and should be read in conjunction with the General Procedures for Quality Reviews which outline the generic elements of the process common to reviews of Schools, Programmes, Administrative Units and Research Institutes.

The procedure reflects the QQI Core Statutory Quality Assurance Guidelines \(April 2016\) and the Standards and Guidelines for Quality Assurance in the European Higher Education Area \(ESG\) Part 1 \(May 2015\). It also reflects information requested under the College's action plan in response to the HEA Gender Equity Report and the College's Diversity & Inclusion Strategy.

2. Purpose

2.1 These procedures set out broad guidelines for the review of Administrative Units, which aims to facilitate a critical self-assessment of the Unit under review by the Head of the Unit, staff, student users, and the relevant College Officer/Division Head.

2.2 The purpose of the review is:

- to provide a structured opportunity for the Unit to critically reflect on its activities and plans for development;
- to ensure that service provision and administrative activities are in line with the overall mission and strategic objectives of the College;
- to obtain constructive commentary and advice on the strategic direction of the Unit from external reviewers to College that are experts in their field at a senior level;
- to ensure that quality and standards in service provision are being maintained and enhanced, and that any areas of concern are identified and addressed;
- to promote the enhancement of the Unit's provision as part of a strategy for continuous quality improvement, to identify best practice through benchmarking services against institutional comparators and assess client/stakeholder satisfaction.
